SDLN Highlights of 1992

- Upgraded SDLN computer system and PALS software to latest available version.

- Added the Aberdeen Public Library, the EROS Library, the Huron Public Library, the Mitchell Public Library, and the SouthEast Vocational Technical Institute in 1992, changing the network membership composition as follows:
  - Public academic institutions
  - Private academic institutions
  - Public libraries
  - K-12 school libraries
  - Medical-related libraries
  - South Dakota State Library
  - Vocational-technical library
  - Special libraries

- Achieved peak usage of 100,000 transactions per day.

- Compiled following bibliographic database, as of October 31, 1992:
  - 2,165,403 records
  - 1,178,822 unique and distinct records

- Enrolled a total of 156 dial-up libraries as of October 31, 1992.

- Hired full-time professional Director of SDLN.

- Affiliated SDLN with South Dakota Board of Regents.

The Network

The South Dakota Library Network (SDLN) is a statewide automated library system of twenty-five member libraries with more than two million items in its database. It was created by the State Library under South Dakota Codified Law (SDCL) 14-1-48 to establish, maintain, and operate a computerized library network in order to promote statewide resource sharing among libraries and to increase access to libraries and information for South Dakota citizens.

Member libraries include public, school, hospital, governmental, and both private and public college and university libraries. SDLN is a comprehensive automated library system which allows libraries to search the holdings of all the member institutions, as well as to perform the basic library functions of circulation, acquisitions, controlling serials and inventory, and to facilitate interlibrary loans between institutions. In 1991, the SDLN was expanded to provide linkage to the libraries in the Minnesota State University System (MSUS), Traverse de Sioux (MN) System (TDS) and North Dakota's Online Dakota Information Network (ODIN).

The Vision*

In the year 2000, the South Dakota Library Network (SDLN) will reach into every school, public, academic, and special library, and into every state and local government office in South Dakota. Electronic gateways will provide access by businesses and community organizations to SDLN. Network databases will be accessed via terminals in member libraries or dial-up modems and via Internet/NREN (the National Research Education Network). Internet/NREN gateways will allow users of SDLN to access other library catalogs worldwide. A sixth subsystem to permit online reference assistance will be added to the existing five -- the catalog, circulation, serials, interlibrary loan, and acquisitions. Additional databases (bibliographic, full-text, and multimedia) will be added to the options available on the online catalog. Shared collection development information will enable member libraries to maximize capital resources expenditures. Improved hardware and software will lead to the inclusion of digital audio and video image technology. SDLN will be linked using the high-speed five optic backbone of state, regional, and federal telecommunication networks.

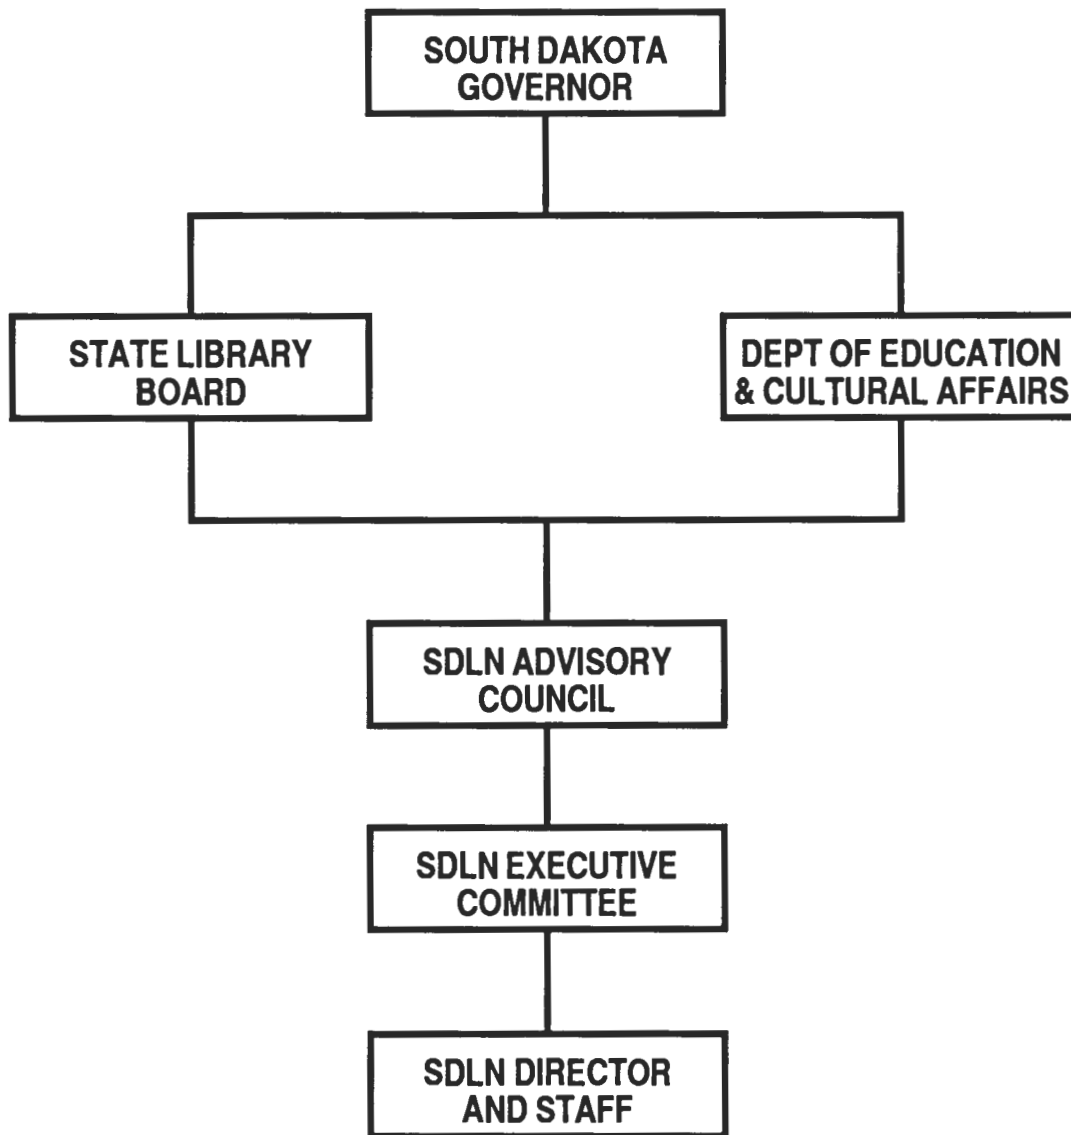

As community networks evolve, SDLN will be utilized by people at home and on the move via computers, sophisticated televisions, and smart phones, to create an information environment. This environment will not only supply needed information but will engage the person in learning. When fully evolved, this information environment will work on many levels, be multi-sensory, multi-modal, and capable of being personalized to the individual, to curriculum, or to business needs. In this environment, the library world will be part of a virtual world where learning is accomplished via simulation.

The South Dakota Library Network is both a backbone and a beginning to support the information services that will be demanded by the citizens of South Dakota in the future.

Governance and Administration

- The SDLN Advisory Council is made up of a representative from each member library, a representative of the dial access libraries, and a designee of the Executive Director of the Board of Regents.
- The SDLN Executive Committee includes: the State Librarian as Chair; the chair of the SDLN Advisory Council; a designee of the Executive Director of the Board of Regents; and four members elected by the Advisory Council.
- The SDLN director and staff are employees of the South Dakota Board of Regents and report to the Executive Director through the Director of the Regents' Information System.
- The UNISYS Corporation has a contract with SDLN for the PALS software currently used by the network and SDLN has purchased a UNISYS mainframe computer to run the system.

Interlibrary Loan Analysis

Interlibrary Loan South Dakota Libraries

- Loans of items between libraries are an important way to improve the availability of library resources in the state.
- By sharing resources through Interlibrary loans, libraries can avoid duplicate purchasing and expand offerings to patrons.

Interlibrary Loan All Transactions

- One of the original goals of SDLN was to foster interlibrary loans by making the holdings of all member libraries accessible to anyone using the network.
- The graph above indicates an increase in interlibrary loan transactions since SDLN began in both instate and total transactions.

Interlibrary Loan Instate Transactions

- These graphs above and at right break out the transactions by type of library.
- Before SDLN, the State Library accounted for a large number of interlibrary loans.
- Since SDLN, the other libraries are more aware of each other's collections and are sharing resources in increasing numbers.
