DEDICATORY

The pages of this book have been compiled for the purpose of making a place in history for the brave boys of Edmunds County, South Dakota, who forsook the farm, the store, the shop and the office for the purpose of aiding in establishing democracy throughout the wide land. Coming generations will read these pages with interest and view the pictures with pleasure and satisfaction as well as with veneration.

It is in full realization of the weakness of his best efforts that the compiler has undertaken to do justice to the American soldiers, sailors and marines of the World War of 1917, 1918, 1919, in giving this book to the public, but it is with the utmost pleasure that he dedicates the same to the soldiers, sailors and marines of Edmunds County, South Dakota.

FOREWORD

The War of the Nations, the most stupendous struggle the world ever witnessed, involved every continent and all the great powers on the globe.

On June 28, 1914, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir-presumptive to the throne of Austria-Hungary, was killed at Sarajevo, Bosnia. Austria believed the murder was plotted in Servia, and sent that country an ultimatum on July 23, followed by a declaration of war on July 28. Russia protested and mobilized her forces. Germany declared war on Russia August 1 and on France August 3, on which day she invaded Belgium. England joined with France and Russia August 4.

Of the other European countries, Belgium was forced into the war to defend her neutrality; Montenegro threw in her lot with Servia from the beginning; Italy, Japan, Portugal, and finally Roumania joined the Allies, while Turkey and Bulgaria took the side of Germany and Austria.

The independent and peace-loving countries of the new world endeavored to maintain an impartial neutrality, but their rights as neutrals were constantly disregarded. In her submarine warfare, Germany attacked liners and neutral merchant ships, contrary to all precedents of civilized warfare. February 1, 1917, Germany announced a renewal of submarine warfare against all vessels approaching the British coast, regardless of character or nationality. The United States immediately severed diplomatic relations with Germany, on February 3, 1917, and on April 6, Congress declared a state of war existing between the two countries. On April 7, the Republics of Cuba and Panama aligned themselves with the United States in war on Germany. The sinking of a Brazilian vessel on the same day led that great South American Republic to sever diplomatic relations with Germany on April 10. China had already done this on March 14. Thus, countries not affected by the particular rivalries of Europe were drawn into the war.

Early in May, 1915, Germany sank the Lusitania, a Cunard liner and one of the finest vessels afloat, causing a loss of hundreds of people, including American citizens. Relations were already strained between the two countries and this serious example of German treachery calling for decisive action, determined President Wilson upon placing the matter before Congress. This he did, and on April 2, 1917, after repeated attempts had been made to arrive at terms with the German government, a special session of Congress authorized the President to issue a formal declaration of war against Germany and voted $7,000,000,000 for the purpose of preparation.

It was then up to the United States of America to make good and how right well she did it is best witnessed by the splendid victories achieved by her soldiers.

With the end in view of giving our own sons in Edmunds County, South Dakota, their proper places in history, this "In the World War" record has been compiled and the prayer of its author is that it may be sufficiently acceptable that generations yet unborn may read with pride of the accomplishments of their fathers in the great and lasting cause of Democracy.

A Bit of Local History

Future generations will be interested in knowing, as history is carefully recorded, what part their forefathers played in the development of the great West, and particularly interested will our children and children's children be concerning the parts played by those forefathers in the times when freedom was in the balance and humanity was breathless from excitement.

The people of Ipswich, Edmunds County, S. D., take special pride in the fact that since April 27, 1904, an organization, having for its purpose the ends and means necessary for protection to a community, state and nation, was originated and found its being in the town of Ipswich, S. D.

It was in this year, 1904, that C. B. Foscarnon, of Eureka, S. D., and Avid J. Barker, then a resident of Ipswich, took upon themselves the important task of organizing, to operate in connection with the Hired Guards of Eureka, S. D., an Ipswich detachment. This detachment organization was effected through the initiation efforts of these men, ably assisted by Lockwood E. Smith, now a resident of this city, and until mustered out, on March 24, 1919, a Captain in the U. S. Army.

On April 21, 1905, the Second and Third Infantry was reorganized and from such reorganization sprang the Fourth South Dakota National Guards, which numbered within its ranks the Ipswich detachment of the Hired Guards. Then it was, on May 5, 1905, that our Ipswich boys became full-fledged soldiers, subject to call and prepared by the State to meet such wartime emergencies as might arise.

In the meantime, Lieutenant Barker having resigned, Lockwood E. Smith of Ipswich, next in command, assumed the duties incident to the regulation of the Ipswich detachment of Co. L, South Dakota National Guards. On November 5, 1914, Lieutenant Smith, believing that Ipswich should have separate recognition, added to our prestige and military importance, by having the Ipswich detachment designated as the Mounted Scouts of the Fourth Infantry, and as such they were called into Federal service, on June 21, 1916, having a membership of twenty-four of the young, able-bodied men of this place. Relations with Mexico becoming strained, and the need of military power on the borders becoming apparent, the Mounted Scouts, under Smith, who had previously been advanced to the Captaincy of the company commanding, was ordered to mobilize at Rollfield, S. D., and at this mobilization camp an organization of the Machine Gun Company, 4th Infantry, S. D. N. G., was perfected; and on July 1, 1916, Captain Smith resumed command. Then it was that the original Company of the Mounted Scouts, of Ipswich, became divided, some remaining with the Mounted Orderlies, while others were transferred to the Machine Gun Company.

On March 3, 1917, matters on the Mexican border warranting the action, the South Dakota regiment, among those of other states, was returned, and on March 3, 1917, the regiment was mustered out of Federal service but still remained, to all intents and purposes, the Machine Gun Company of 4th Infantry, S. D. N. G.

On July 5, 1917, the Machine Gun Company was again called into service and for a period of two months underwent training and military discipline in a regularly ordered camp in the city of Ipswich, South Dakota.

On September 28, 1917, the Machine Gun Company was ordered into camp in North Carolina, and Camp Greene was its objective point, when it entrained on that date. Arriving at this camp on October 3, 1917, the Company was immediately transferred to the 148th Machine Gun Battalion and designated as D Co.

Later, this Company was transferred to Camp Mills, where it remained for a period of six weeks. It was then sent to Camp Merritt, where it was stationed until January 10, 1918, when it was ordered to embark for France and the field of action. Arriving in France, the Company was, on April 4, 1918, transferred to the 148th M. G. Bn., and thus it was that many of the boys of Ipswich remained in a body instead of being promiscuously scattered.

The Company, on February 15, 1919, after the armistice had been signed in November, were ordered to convey for home, and arrived in New York on February 28, 1919, after which, discharges at Camp Dodge, Iowa, followed, and excepting the very few whose bodies rest in French soil, and whose lives were sacrificed in the interest of humanity, the boys are once more among us, ripe from experience and physically and morally better men.

Our Soldier Dead

"In Flanders fields, where poppies blow,"
In France where beauteous roses grow,
There let them rest—forever sleep,
While we eternal vigil keep
With our heart's love, with our soul's pray'r,
For all our fallen "Over There."

The sounding sea between us rolls
And in perpetual requiem tolls—
Three thousand miles of cheerless space
Lie 'twixt us and their resting place;
'Twas God who took them by the hand
And left them in a stranger land.

The earth is sacred where they fell—
Forever on it lies the spell
Of hero deeds in Freedom's cause,
And men unborn shall come and pause
To say a prayer, or bow the head,
So leave these graves to hold their dead.

Let not our sighing or our tears
Fall on them through the coming years,
Who on the land, on sea, in air,
With dauntless courage everywhere,
Their homes, their country glorified—
Stood to their arms, and smiling died.

Great France will leave no need nor room,
That we place flowers on their tomb—
And proudly o'er their resting place
Will float forever in its grace,
O'er cross, and star, and symbol tag,
Their own beloved country's flag.

The morning sun will gild with light,
The stars keep holy watch at night,
The winter spread a pall of snow,
The summer flowers about them grow,
The sweet birds sing their springtime call,
God's love and mercy guard them all.

THE EDITOR was unable to secure photographs of the following men of Edmunds County, who were in the service. Many of them were found to be transients, boys who had no parents or other relatives in the county and had been recruited into the Machine Gun Co. Of a few there were no acceptable photographs to be had. Another handful was indifferent to the work, and preferred not to appear among the likenesses of our Edmunds County boys of whom we are all so proud. That due credit may be given for their services, of whatever nature it may have been, the names of those Edmunds County men whose pictures are not published herewith, are listed below:

LIBERTY LOANS

The news that Edmunds County was allotted $220,000.00 for its share of the Third Liberty Loan was received by the people of the county with a spirit of "Over the Top." Mr. Barron, the chairman for meetings, had this for his theme and it was no surprise. The population of Edmunds County was 50 per cent Russian German at the opening of the campaign for the Third Liberty Loan, and one of the first acts of Mr. Beebe was to see that Henry Gross, of Bowdle, was appointed vice chairman for the west end. It is safe to say that at the end of the 5th Loan the population was 100 per cent American. An intensive educational campaign was inaugurated with E. D. Barron as the principal speaker and William Keim as the speaker in German, and a meeting was put on in every township in the county. For three weeks the officers laid aside personal affairs, and divided all energies to the support of the boys in khaki. Edgar A. Guest, the well known poet, wrote the following poem especially for the Edmunds County Committee.

The Liberty Loan

When they come back across the sea, To chum again with you and me, How will you feel unless you've done Your share to carry freedom on? They're coming! They who've done so much.

With sightless eyes and tapping crutch And empty sleeves and honor's scars, Victorious from the field of Mars Will shame you with their sacrifice Unless you've also shared the price.

Man, will you have the face to greet The grieving mother on the street, Who gave her all that you and yours Might live in freedom on these shores? Her tears will mock you day by day; The grave in Flanders far away With tongues, by liberty re-born, Will fairly shriek at you in scorn, Unless your conscience tells to you That you have shared the burden too.

Across the sea your brothers die! How will you hesitate to buy? For you they die the line to hold! Will you not lend to them your gold? You're not asked to face the foe; You are not asked from home to go; In peace and safety you may live. Have you a dollar you won't give For Freedom and to earn the right To chum with them who make the fight?

The drive started April 6th and that evening telegrams were sent to McAdoo that Edmunds County had gone over the top with $10,000.00 to spare, being one of the first three counties in the United States to report on the Third Liberty Loan. The loyal officers of the townships did not stop but rolled up $35,000.00. Harmony was the first township to report a bond sold to every man of 21 or over, and eight other townships followed with a bond in every home. The war was brought home to the Pro-Germans and the loan finally closed with all slackers cleaned up.

The Fourth Loan came during harvest, with a shortage of labor that interfered with the prompt securing of subscriptions. No meetings were held but the people were requested to meet at their polling places and subscribe of their own will. The allotment of $350,000.00 was subscribed with $12,000.00 extra to show the determination of the citizens to beat hell out of Germany. An effort was made to distribute the bonds as widely as possible, and Clear Lake Township reported 115 bonds out of a total population of men, women and children of 130.

On the Fifth Loan E. D. Barron was appointed chairman and in his usual quiet, but determined way he led the loyal people of Edmunds county to victory. The apportionment of $250,000.00 was passed early in the drive and at the time of this article the signed subscriptions passing through Mr. Barron's hands were over $250,000.00. Mr. Barron also secured double subscriptions from some parties who did not meet all of their allotments on the 4th Loan.

Mrs. Maude Champlin

When the world-wide epidemic, influenza, reached Edmunds County, in the winter of 1918-19, it fairly prostrated business and many families were calling for care and assistance. Then, it was, that skill, backed by courage and public spirit, played its most important part, and no one person did more toward lessening suffering and saving precious lives than did Mrs. Maude Champlin, and the people of Edmunds County take this means of extending thanks to this lady who performed such heroic service.

A. B. Chubbuck

County Treasurer

Early in the war, and before others were fully awake to the needs and requirements of our government as it concerned the stay-at-homes, Miss Meyers, singly and alone undertook the task of organizing into concrete, working form that which finally resolved itself into a very active, war time auxiliary in Edmunds county—the American Red Cross. Thru the efforts and uniring work of this young lady, assisted by other loyal citizens, the Red Cross became a power for good and its record will live after peace has long prevailed.

Late in the year 1917, Hon. L. J. Thomas, then Mayor of the City of Ipswich, believing that the citizens of Eastern Edmunds County should organize for the purpose of assisting the Government in bringing to justice those men or women of Edmunds County who persisted in the practice of aiding and abetting the enemy, called together a goodly number of men known to be loyal, patriotic citizens. As a result of the first meeting an organization was formed and the name of "Ipswich Vigilance Corps, of the American Defense Society" was adopted and Mr. Thomas was chosen as the first president. The president called to his assistance an executive board of four members, consisting of representative business men, as follows: R. F. Finch, F. J. Tracy, Harry Coulter and Dean Hurlbut, which board selected C. L. Jackson as its secretary and Dean Hurlbut, treasurer.

Once organized, the Corps proceeded immediately to the business at hand, after first naming suitable committees. This proved to be a most valuable agency for good, and its influence became noticeable and far-reaching. For the period of the war three members patrolled the streets of Ipswich at night and without compensation looked closely after the welfare of the cities of Ipswich, Roscoe and towns in the county, while the citizens slept the sleep of confidence and satisfaction.

History of "Edmunds County in the World War" would be incomplete without a word of commendation for this wartime organization, as every soldier who left the county will bear testimony.

THE EDMUNDS COUNTY COUNCIL OF DEFENSE

The Edmunds County Council of Defense was one of the outgrowths of war activities and the members whose pictures appear on page 46 were appointed by the Governor to carry out all the war activities along defense lines. They served during the entire period of the war and their work has received the highest commendation. Wherever pro-German sentiment showed, the Council of Defense was active in suppressing any such propaganda. In the sale of Liberty and Victory Bonds it took an active part in bringing slackers to realize that they were a part of the Government and it was their duty to lend their credit to its support. They are strong men, who have been identified with the up-building of the county and state, and their work goes down in history as patriotically performed, without remuneration, in support of the greatest government conceived by the mind of man.

FIVE SONS IN WAR

I have been asked by several citizens of our talented little city to have the correspondence of my boys in the American Expeditionary Forces published, or to write something of their activities at the front. As the opportunity presents itself and for the benefit of the many inquirers who ask of me from day to day about my sons in the American army, I will write a brief sketch of each, and his respective station in the American service as far as is known to me.

I wish to state herein that I am thankful indeed to the people, one and all, who have so interested themselves in soliciting information and are anxious about the welfare of my sons in the war.

1—Leo M. Butler left Ipswich with a party of selects on June 24th, last year, and was sent to Camp Johnson, Fla., on July 20th. Later he was promoted to corporal in a July detachment of chauffeurs and sent to Camp Hill, Va., On August 29, 1918, he sailed for France and the third boy to go to the front. However, as I understand it, he did not stop in France with the other troops but was sent to other parts of Europe on some special business, and which, on account of the ban on information, has not been disclosed to me. He arrived in France about October 20th. My last intelligence from there was November 24th, received here December 15th, at which time all were well and unharmed in the land of occupation.

2—Clint M. Butler, my youngest son, a student of the Brothers’ School, Ottawa, Ill., where his brothers, each in turn, spent a part of their school days, enlisted in the 91st Aero Squadron on August 8, 1917. He was sent to Kelly Field, Texas, where he remained about two months. Then he was sent to Hamstead, Long Island, and on October 26, 1917, sailed for France. On June 20, 1918, he made his first high flight of 13,000 ft over the enemy lines and back. Day after day this operation was repeated, taking notes of positions of the enemy; in battle sallying over the lines and hurling missiles of death and destruction from thousands of feet in the air down upon the unfortunate below. It may be understood that Clint is only the operator of the plane; the observer sits in the rear. The operator of the airplane, however, is monarch of all he surveys, and unlike chauffeurs on the ground could not be subjected to waiting expectantly for orders in the air, takes his course (which the observer must adjust) and changes as he sees best to avoid disaster before he starts.

3—Thomas S. Butler enlisted in the Merchant Marine. From the J. J. Branch School of Engineering in Chicago for a term, received a second lieutenantcy from that school and was sent to Boston, Mass., and placed on board the U. S. S. America, which when last heard from was at Portland, Me.

4—Matthew B. Butler received a lieutenantcy in the 21st Engineers at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., on June 14, 1917. On September 8th of the same year he was sent to Camp Grant, Ill., and on December 26, 1917, sailed for France. On July 22, 1918, he was promoted to a lieutenantcy in the 4th Section General Staff of General Pershing’s first army.

5—William E. Butler enlisted in the Aviation Corps on February 8, 1918, and was sent to Cambridge, Mass.; on May 20th he received a second lieutenantcy from a school of aeronautics. Later he was sent to Sefridge Field, Mich., where he acted as instructor until November 4th, when he was sent to Garden City, Long Island, to instruct in a school of aeronautics, at which place he was when last heard of.

Yours for world democracy,

M. V. Butler.
Red Cross and Other Activities

IPSWICH CHAPTER, AMERICAN RED CROSS

The Edmunds County Chapter of the American Red Cross, was organized at a mass meeting at the Ipswich Armory, in June, 1917, and the following officers were elected:

F. J. Tracy, Pres.; M. Plim Beebe, Vice Pres.; Geo. C. Meadows, Treas.; Julius Skag, Secy.

During that year branches were established at Bowdle, Hosmer, Mina and Roscoe, with support of the Loyalton and Powell. At the time of the Christmas Drive in 1917 over 2,200 members were secured throughout the county.

In November, 1917, Geo. C. Meadows resigned as treasurer and Ed. D. Barron was elected to take his place, and in July, 1918, Mrs. Willard A. Brown was appointed to replace Julius Skag, who moved to Mohrbridge at that time.

Mrs. Frank Tracy was chosen as superintendent of the Women's Work, which included sewing, knitting and surgical dressings. Mrs. Benj. Jones was in charge of the surgical dressing department, and classes were organized, with about thirty-five members in all. This work as well as the sewing was carried on at the Court House. Miss Zoa Langlois took charge of the yarn until September, 1918, but was obliged to give it up as she was unable to devote the time required to it. Mrs. Allen took over this department, and the yarn was moved to the library.

Every soldier who has left Edmunds county has been fitted out with a comfort kit, a sweater and a pair of socks. In addition, the Home Service Department, with Mrs. Tracy as chairman, has rendered assistance, financially when necessary, and has secured information for both the soldiers and their families.

In November, 1918, the Red Cross exhibited another phase of its usefulness in the shape of two hospitals, one stationed at Hosmer and the other at Ipswich, for the care of those who had contracted the "flu." These hospitals were disband when the epidemic had run its course.

The work of the Red Cross is not yet completed, and it is to be a permanent organization to render assistance wherever and whenever needed. However, the Executive Committee wishes to thank the people of Edmunds County for their cooperation during the war, for their interest, and last, but not least, for their liberal donations from time to time, which has enabled it to carry out successful its aims and aspirations.

Y. M. C. A. ACTIVITIES.

Edmunds County gave a splendid account of itself in the matter of Y. M. C. A. activities, contributing as high as $3,500 in a single afternoon's drive. M. Plim Beebe, president of the Bank of Ipswich, was County Chairman of this activity and the record made is one to be proud of.

Ipswich alone, on the afternoon of a day in 1917, contributed more than $1,200 in cash, and at all times its citizens indicated with cash their loyalty to the boys who were jeopardizing life, health and happiness in the cause of Democracy.

POWELL RED CROSS AUXILIARY

The Powell Red Cross Auxiliary organized April 6th, 1918, Mrs. W. C. Hughes was chairman and Mrs. W. C. Williams, Katie Sinclair and Mrs. W. B. Hodson were the sewing supervisors. We made 78 pajama suits, 48 bed sheets and 154 kits.

Mrs. R. M. Evans had charge of the knitting department. The finished knitting is as follows: 150 pairs socks and 30 sweaters. We are knitting on orphan garments now and have turned in three mufflers.

Four members, Mrs. W. C. Williams, Mabel Sinclair, Margaret Davies and Mrs. W. C. Hughes were qualified surgical dressing supervisors, but the influenza broke out as we were ready to start that branch.

The Auxiliary turned over $165.00 to the Ipswich Chapter and have about $40.00 in the treasury now. We bought two sewing machines, and the Ladies Aid of Powell donated one sewing machine. Mrs. J. B. Evans donated a machine for the duration of the war. Mrs. Williams and Hudson Bros. donated a cup board.

AN AMERICAN PLATFORM

By Daniel Webster

I shall stand by the Union, and by all who stand by it. I shall do justice to the whole country, according to the best of my ability, in all I say, and act for the good of the whole country in all I do. I mean to stand upon the Constitution. I need no other platform. I shall knoll that one country. The ends I aim, shall be my country's, my God's, and truth's. I was born an American; I live an American; I shall die an American; and I intend to perform the duties incumbent upon me in that character to the end of my career. I mean to do this, with absolute disregard of personal consequences. What are personal consequences? What is the individual man, with all the good or evil that may attach to him, in comparison with the good or evil which may befall a great country in a crisis like this, and in the midst of great transactions which concern the country's fate? Let the consequences be what they will, I am careless. No man can suffer too much, and no man can fall too soon, if he suffer, or if he fall in defense of the liberties and Constitution of his country.

BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Soon after America had determined upon an entry into the war, the members of the Board of County Commissioners of Edmunds County indicated that as custodians of the public funds it was their duty to assist in every manner possible in relieving the individual burdens of the citizens by appropriating liberally. To this end they proceeded to set aside large sums of money and unstintingly provided assistance in every manner consistent with law and good Americanism. Much credit is due the men whose likenesses appear on Page 44 of this book, and their names, as well as the names of Lester Jones and Shirley Lewis, ex-members, will go down into history as those of real patriots.
A Bit of History

SOUTH DAKOTA SCORES AGAIN

This State Has Given One Man Out of Every Twenty to the Great World War—Leads the Others

South Dakota shattered another record during the war. In addition to its immense crop production and the way it went "over the top" on Liberty Loans and all the other big drives, it appears that South Dakota furnished more men for service per capita of its population than any other state in the Union.

34,000 Men to Service

Arizona laid claim to this honor by giving 12,000 men out of its 250,000 population, which includes the reservation Indians not subject to the selective draft. But South Dakota did better than that, for with its 640,000 population, including some 25,000 Indians, part of whom are reservation charges, it gave nearly 34,000 men to the nation, thus raising the basis of Arizona. South Dakota would only be required to furnish 30,000 men for 265,000 people to match Arizona's 12,000 for her 250,000 so that this state exceeds the record of its southern sister by a wide margin, and gave better than one for every twenty of its population, men, women and children.

According to returns prepared by Adjutant General W. A. Morris, South Dakota's contribution of men was as follows:

Voluntary enlistments ....................... 10,268
Selective draft ................................ 21,517
Navy and Marines .............................. 1,006

Total registrations.......................... 141,248

South Dakota soldiers went over with the first contingent sent across, and continued to go over at intervals until November, but as they were brigaded with no reference to states it is impossible to follow units to any extent: the veteran Fourth South Dakota, however, were chiefly apportioned to the 149th, 147th and 188th Field Artillery, went to France in December, 1917, and January, 1918, and in a general way were kept in contact so that the movements of these boys could be more definitely known and they rendered valiant service on the western front from the spring until the close of the war.

HISTORY AND ITS MAKING

From that memorable day just before daybreak of April 19, 1775, when that little band of minute men, farmer boys, assembled on the village green of Lexington, in response to the alarm sounded in that midnight ride of Paul Revere, to the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown, the Colonial army made it possible in the intervening years to establish the greatest and freest government the world has ever known.

The Union Army of the Civil War in that terrible struggle saved that "Government of the people, by the people, for the people," from perishing from the earth. The American army of 98 and the army of the World War, have carried their beneficent influences to lands beyond the seas that made possible the triumph of right over might.

The personages who hold the attention of the American people today are the American soldiers and sailors. Our boys, in all respects, they have proven themselves worthy of their fathers and the land whose flag they flew; worthy of the traditions of our glorious past.

The memory of these men is a heritage in the annals of time. Our boys are coming back across the seas, but not all of them are coming home. The seal of death is on the lips of 70,000. These sleep the sleep of heroes and martyrs, but there remains of them a spirit force that will not die, an example that endures and plays its wholesome magic on the hearts of them that live.

The memory of these men is a heritage left in trust, to enrich the nation's life for all time to come.

Abraham Lincoln sensed profoundly and beautifully the influence that patriots dead weave into the purpose of a benedictive people. On the eve of the Civil War, in his first inaugural address, he closed with these words:

"The mystic chord of memory stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

Those who come back are no longer boys in experience, they come back men. War has chastened them and written new ideals indelibly upon their minds. They have a background of human experience; better than reading history, they were in its making.

There is a new meaning for them in the striving of the boys of '76 and the saviors of the Union by the boys of '61, in the motive that impelled this country to clash at arms in '98, in the flag that waved over all these patriots, in the purpose that activated this country in this new age. The American army and navy from Lexington to the Rhine has no equal in all records of time. It has been the greatest civilizing influence the world has ever known. It has written in blood the most brilliant pages of all history.
Poetry

A SOLDIER'S PRAYER.

By Bosse Bradford, Ipswich, S. D.

Now I lay me down to sleep—
I pray the Lord my gun to keep.
Grant no other soldier takes
My shoes and socks before I wake.

Lord, please guard me in my slumber;
Keep this cot upon its lumber,
Let no pegs or guide ropes break
To let this tent down, ere I wake.

Keep me safely in Thy sight,
Grant no fire-drills sound at night.
In the morning let me wake
Breathing scents of sirloin steak.

God protect me in my dreams—
Make it better than it seems.
Grant the time may swiftly fly,
When I myself may rest on high.

Deliver me from work and drills,
And when I'm sick, don't feed me pills,
And should I hurt this hand of mine,
Don't dink it up with iodine.

In a snowy feather bed,
There I long to lay my head,
Far away from old camp scenes
And from scents of half-baked beans.

Take me back into the land
Where I can walk without a hand;
Where no thrilling bugle blows,
AND THE WOMEN WASH THE CLOTHES.
Amen.

SINCE THE BOYS CAME BACK

By C. L. Jackson

We hear some frightful stories, since the boys got back;
Each carrying loads of glory besides his regular pack;
And us tenderfeet must take 'em for the whole dishgusted fact.
Since the boys came strolling homeward with a story and a pack.

We all are hilly listeners, since the boys came back,
And we show 'em true politeness, nor let occasion lack:
For they've been right at the doin's, in numberless attacks,
And don't you dare to question but that all are truthful facts.

Taint every common dublet who's been privileged in France,
So prepare to close your fly-trap as the kid-dies homeward prance.
When they sally right up to you in their own true Yankee way,
Better smile and listen, neighbor, till the kids have had their say.

You may be a smooth old geezer and with wisdom somewhat smack,
But you show yourself a mossback, since the boys came back.

WHY THEY FOUGHT

In the course of his remarks at a recent dinner of the Home Market Club at Boston, Senator Geo. H. Moses, of New Hampshire, quoted the following lines written, he said, by a versifying friend of his:

"Jos Jimsonweed, a corporal from out in Yankatee,
Went forth to meet a German squad and chased them up a tree.
And as he did so, loud he cried above the battle's roar,
'Hurrath for our dear President—and Peace Point Number Four.'

"Pat Murphy of the horse marines, a leath-er-neck of old,
Met up one day with seven Hans and laid the muckers cold.
He murmured as he put an end to all their evil tricks,
'My only motive is my love for Peace Point Number Six.'

"'Upon the battlefield was found, right at the point of death,
A gallant lad who said these words with scant and failing breath,
'Tis sad to think that in this way I should have met my fate,
But never mind, I've done my bit for Peace Point Number Eight.'

"'Oh, many a time in blood-stained France
The standers-by could hear
Our Yankees charge into the fray with this resounding cheer:
'Huzzah, huzzah, we'll win the day, and never shall we cease,
Till we have forced upon the foe our Fourteen Points of Peace.'"

AND THOSE COLORS DID NOT RUN

By C. L. Jackson

When Kaiser Bill quit shipping his dyes into the States,
The populace grew frantic, fairly raving at the rates.
For we had to have some colors that would stand the rain and sun—
Shades we always could depend on and whose colors wouldn't run.

Versatile old Yankee genius, always there
to find a way,
Soon discovered there were colors bein' made in U. S. A.,
Comin' fully up to standard and warranted
to do.
So we're usin' 'em for common—the red, the white, and blue.

Poor old Deutschland lies rotting at a wharf on Scotland's shore,
And she will not carry dye stuffs for the Kaiser any more.
'Cause we've found we have the colors that will stand the rain and sun,
And you can bet your bottom dollar that these colors didn't run.

United States troops take and pass beyond St. Georges, Inecourt, Langvilliers, Chenuy, Remonville, Estanne and Chivy-le-Grand.

Nov. 3—United States bombing air machines attack Martincourt, Monzay, Beauchamp and Beaumont. French and Americans clear enemy out of Bouraine Woods and whole of Argonne region; take Chateau-sur-Barbe and Bois du Chene, Toge, Belleville, Quatre-Champs, Nonval and Les Aulnois.

Nov. 4—All towns on west bank of Meuse south of Halles now in American hands. United States troops penetrate village of Beaumont and occupy Langvilliers, opposite Stenay; take Les Grandes Armoises, and advance over three miles.

United States troops move seven and a half miles from Cargue, on Mezieres-Metz railroad, and nine miles from Sedan. America accepts truce terms, immediate ending of hostilities by land, on sea and in air; demobilization of Austro-Hungarian army; immediate withdrawal of German forces along the Meuse river to Switzerland, half of equipment to be surrendered; evacuation of all territory invaded since war began; military and railway equipment and coal to be given up; no new destruction, pillage or requisitions; right of free movement over territory and means of communication; evacuation in 15 days of all German troops, any remaining to be interned; formalities of evacuated territory to administer under allied control; repatriation without reciprocity of all allied prisoners of war and internees; evacuation of all fortified naval bases; definite information of location and movements of Austro-Hungarian ships to be given; surrender of 15 submarines and all German submarines now in or hereafter entering Austro-Hungarian waters; other surface warships to be disarmed; 34 warships to be surrendered; freedom of the Adriatic and up the Danube; allies and United States to occupy or dismantle fortifications; blockade conditions unchanged, naval aircraft to be concentrated at designated bases; evacuation of Italian coasts; occupation by allies and United States of land and sea fortifications; merchant vessels to be returned; no destruction of ships or material; naval and marine prisoners to be returned without reciprocity.

Nov. 5—Marshal Foch has the allies' armistice terms ready for the Germans. Southward from Ghent the Americans went further over the Scheldt, above Audenarde, while south of there British forces occupied a wide stretch of the eastern river bank.

Pershing's First Army completed its advance on both banks of the Meuse. Crossings were made north and south of Dun, and large forces made good their hold on the hills of the eastern bank and pressed on toward Stenay, from which they were distant six miles, and Monthermy. By an advance of more than four miles on the center were the Metropolis Division from New York (not being operated) they passed beyond Rancourt Wood to within five miles of the point where the great trunk line to Metz crosses the river and within eight miles of Sedan. The American forces later captured Liny-devant-Dun, six miles south of Stenay, east of the Meuse. They were also occupying the hills on the east bank of the river, despite a still machine gun resistance by the Germans.

Nov. 6—Reports from the center of the American line are to the effect that the town of Monzay is on fire and that part of Sedan is burning. Its footing established east of the Meuse, the American army has forced its way along both banks of the river to within six miles of Sedan. American and French troops continue their advance. Murvaux, north of the Freya line and east of Dun, was reached this afternoon, and operations about the heights to the east of Sedan are under way.

Nov. 7—The Americans have not only captured Sedan in their advance on both sides of the Meuse, but have made a jump toward the Brey iron mines, which the Longuyon line protects. For some time now has been under the fire of American guns. With that part of Sedan resting on the western bank of the river occupied, the American army is consolidating its positions and preparing for a further advance. It was contingents of the noted Rainbow Division and of the First Division that made the final earthbound dash into Sedan. A noontime announcement to all American newspapers that peace terms had been agreed to by Germany made New York City delirious with joy, whistles and sirens blew, bells rang, business was practically abandoned and the streets filled up with merry-makers very similar to an old night before New Year celebration. The excitement continued to a late hour in spite of publication of military orders of the day.

Nov. 8—Germany's armistice delegates were received by Marshal Foch at 9 A.M. in a railroad car in which the commander-in-chief has his headquarters. Matthias Erzberger, leader of the enemy delegation, speaking in French, announced that the German government had appointed them plenipotentiaries to take cognizance of the terms and eventually to sign an armistice.
Marshall Foch then read the terms to them, dwelling upon each word. They made a few observations, pointing out difficulties in the way of carrying out some secondary clauses. Then Erzberger asked for the suspension of hostilities. This request Marshall Foch refused. The delegates, having obtained permission to send a courier to Spa, German Great Headquarters, and communicate with that place by wireless, withdrew. The armistice terms called for an answer within 72 hours, expiring at 11 A.M., Monday, the 11th.

The Americans have improved their positions beyond Sedan on both sides of the river, consolidating their tremendous gains of the last four days.

Emperor William has refused a demand of the Socialists that he and the Crown Prince abdicate. Chancellor Maximilian, unable to control the Socialists, who are the most powerful bloc in the Reichstag majority, has resigned.

Nov. 9—"The Kaiser and King has decided to renounce the throne," officially announces the retiring chancellor, Prince Maximilian of Baden. Prince Max acted a few hours as regent. The Americans advanced everywhere along their front. The enemy artillery fire was from large caliber guns, indicating positions a great distance away. One American division reached Monzay in its forward movement in spite of machine guns and a fire from mine-throwers. Five American ambulances drove by mistake into the German lines northeast of Lion-devant-Dun and were captured. Commodore organized a rescue party and returned with the ambulances, four prisoners and three guns. The Americans are in control of both sides of the Meuse and occupied Remoive Wood. They captured the river at Monzay, thus making their line on both sides complete from Villers-devant-Monzay southward.

Nov. 10—The German courier from the meeting place of the armistice negotiations arrived at German great headquarters at 10 A.M. He had been delayed by an explosion of an ammunition depot, which he mistook for firing. The ex-Kaiser and suite fled to Holland, arriving at Eysden, on the frontier, at 7:20 A.M.; thence he went to the Chateau Middachten, owned by Count William F. C. von Bentheim, and Steeg, a town on the Gueudlers Vossel, an arm of the Rhine, 12 miles from the German border. Count zu Reventlow flees to Denmark. Among the incidents of the revolution is the renunciation of the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar and his family of the right of exemption from taxation.

William II, the reigning King of Wurttemberg, abdicated on Friday night, according to Havas Agency dispatches from Basel.

The First and Second American armies in their attacks extending along the Moselle and the Meuse advanced on a front of 71 miles. French troops operating under the American command also advanced at various points. The captured territory included the General Intrenchment of Stenay, Gramaoncourt, east of Verdun, and numerous villages and fortified positions in Lorraine. The entire district in the region of Stenay was flooded by the Germans, who dammed the canals and rivers. The Americans, crossing the River Meuse from below, took Stenay in a great northward push. The Germans shelled the Verdun road in the regions of Cesse, Beaumont, Monzay and Bellen. The Monzay bridge was broken in two places. Along the Meuse from the region of Sedan to Stenay the German machine guns, clinging to the hills overlooking the river, kept flares burning all during Saturday night, preventing the Americans from crossing.

Nov. 11—German envoys signed the armistice terms at Senlis at 5 A.M. Paris time, which took effect at 11 A.M., Paris time (6 A.M. New York time). Delay for evacuation prolonged by 24 hours for the left bank, leading the French to make ready for five days, therefore 31 days in all. A supplementary declaration to the armistice terms was signed to the effect that in the event of the six German battle cruisers, ten battleships, eight light cruisers and fifty destroyers not being handed over owing to a mutinous state, the allies reserve the right to occupy Heligoland as an advance base to enable them to enforce the terms.

President Wilson reads the terms of the German armistice to Congress in joint session, and announces the end of the war. Similar declarations were made to the British parliament, the French National Assembly, and at other allied capitals. In New York and other great cities the event was hailed by celebrations.

When fighting ended the German front line opposite us was approximately as follows: From north on the Chateau d'Hamnoncelles, through the Bois de Lavale, the Bois de Mazieres, the Bois Massene, thence northwest, passing east to Blanche, east of Gramaoncourt, east and north of Nobras Wood, thence through the Grand Cheneas, east of Bezouaux, through the Herbois grassed near Hill 319, north of Chauvay-devant-Danjouville and Hill 320, to the east side of the Thiencourt and the Danjouelles-Metz road, north of Remoive to the north of the Forest of Woerre and Paulain, east and north of Stenay, thence north and slightly west to the end of the sector north of Monzay, along the Meuse.

The front of the Second Army from south to north was: Noncey to Ephe, through the Bois Voirrotte, through the Bois Frebault, to the Moselle River and up the river to a point about two-thirds of a mile south of the town of Stenay, thence west to a point one-third of a mile south of Prency, thence through Rembertecourt to the north of the Bois Dommartin and the Mainbois Farm, skirting the northern end of Lake Lachat, through the Bois des Hautes Epines, through the Bois de Wayrville, St. Hilaire, Marcheville, Rivaille to one-third of a mile south of Ville-en-Woerre.

On the front of the First and Second Armies, between the Meuse and the Moselle, allied troops held the former German front line villages of Ronvaux, Watroux, Blanzen, Mourmaz, Alaincourt, Dieppe and Bezouaux. Thousands of American heavy guns fired the parting shot at the Germans at exactly 11 A.M. At many batteries the artillerymen joined in, singing the German national anthem in the layet of the final shot. We heard a few seconds of silence, then the shells shot through the heavy mist. The gunners cheered, American flags were raised by the soldiers over their dugouts and guns, and at the various headquarters, individual groups unfurled the Stars and Stripes, shook hands and cheered.

THE GREAT WORLD WAR

AN ILLUSTRATED REVIEW

WHEN the World War ended on November 11th, 1918, the armed forces of 25 nations of the globe had been hurling their armies against each other for more than four years in the most colossal struggle of history. After a conflict without parallel, it ended in its 52d month with a casualty total nearing the ten million mark.

Set off by the murder of an ordinary Austrian archduke on June 28th, 1914, by a Serbian political fanatic, the conflagration which had threatened the peace of Europe for decades was thus destined to embroil the leading powers of the world in the most costly and bloody strife known to man.

After a month's diplomatic argument over the affair, Austria formally opened hostilities with her declaration of war on Serbia. General mobilization followed quickly in Russia; a “state of war” was almost immediately declared in Germany. Then on August 1st Germany declared war on Russia, following this with an ultimatum to Belgium demanding that her troops be given free passage across that country. On August 3d, the Teutons included France on their list of enemies. This was followed next day by an ultimatum to Germany from Great Britain demanding that the neutrality of Belgium be respected. When this assurance was not granted by Emperor Wilhelm, Great Britain declared war on Germany. A quick succession of war declarations finally involved the greater share of Europe by the end of the summer.

Mad with the ruthless spirit of conquest the Central Powers marched their armies off to war in grand fashion, boasting that they would return by Christmas time, the conquerers of Europe. Their amazing preparations for the dream of world power almost brought within their grasp the greedy ambition of the Junkers.

The initial successes of the German army in its advance through Belgium and on toward Paris astounded the world. England and France reeled and staggered before the terrific onslaught of the famous Prussian Guards and the other crack armies of the Central Powers. Swept off her feet almost by the spectacular aggression of the enemy, the fate of France virtually hung from a thread as the invader triumphant swept on and on.

Early in September, when they were practically within reach of Paris, the tide was turned against them in the battle of the Marne, September 6-10. French themselves attribute their good fortune at this point to the hand of the Almighty rather than to their superior military strength at the time. This marked the enemy's point of farthest advance.

The atrocities of the advancing Huns during the months of their early triumphs and conquest have been called infamous by conservative journalists and correspondents. Suffice to say, their bloodthirsty ambition to rule and conquer the world knew no bounds, and that their acts and deeds of disgrace will forever remain one of the darkest of the many blotches brought on the German people during the European war.

Believing that the United States had no part to play in the war at that time, President Woodrow Wilson, on August 4th, 1914, officially proclaimed the neutrality of the United States. The war was thus confined to Europe for many months, a struggle mainly between the two great European Alliances—the Triple Alliance composing Germany, Austria Hungary and Italy, against the Triple Entente, composing England, Russia and France. Italy, originally a member of the Triple Alliance, but later one of the chief powers of the Allies, did not enter the war until 1915. She then declared war on all of Germany's Allies, but did not break with Germany herself until late in 1916. Before the war she was a member of the Triple Alliance with Germany and Austria but severed this connection to fight with the Allies.

After the marvelous advances of the first year, the great battle line in Europe remained practically stationary for nearly three years and extended over more than 300 miles. The large armies of each force fought doggedly, suffered heroically and died willingly, in a mighty death-grip whose battles surpassed the most famous of previous wars for loss of life and destruction of property.

The superb Armies of the Russians in the Eastern theater kept the attention of a large German force occupied and away from the Western Front. This fact aided the Allies tremendously and probably prevented a German Peace in the second and third years of the War.

It was while France, England and Italy were staggering before the last big offensive of the enemy early in 1918 that America's force was thrown into the balance in substantial numbers.

Her declaration of war against Germany on April 6th, 1917, grew out of the Central Powers' failure to recognize the rights of neutrals on the high seas. Repeatedly the rights of the United States were violated, and just as repeatedly Germany refused to discontinue her ruthless program of submarine warfare against the world. The sinking of the Lusitania on May 7th, 1915, without warning and with the loss of 1154 lives, 114 of whom were Americans, was regarded by a great many as just cause for a declaration of war against Germany. The President and Congress believing differently, failed to act, and it was not until more sinkings of women and children that the United States decided to step into the breach herself.
Regarded as a mere "bluff" by her adversaries, the United States' entrance apparently failed to cause undue anxiety in Berlin. With an unprepared democracy for another enemy in which a great many were believed to have been opposed to war, Germany had little cause for worry, she declared.

But America went to work. The act produced an electrical effect on her people and almost instantly united her various factions, creeds, parties, and nationalities for one purpose—to crush Germany and her Allies. She became a workshop, with no hours, in her determination to end the European fight victoriously, and thus save democracy for the world. Every effort was bended to the cause, every penny of wealth was eagerly held ready for the call, and every atom of energy was expended in her feverish haste to redeem mankind.

Her sons by the hundreds of thousands rushed to the colors, as their fathers did in the wars of their day, to see another victory added to the flag which had never known defeat. That the distribution of soldiers throughout the land might be as nearly equitable as possible, Congress passed the Selective Service Act in May, 1918, the greatest mobilization machinery developed by any of the 25 nations at war.

Naturally there were obstacles and delays. A nation's task in rising up over night to send a formidable force three thousand miles overseas to fight for world freedom is not the kind that can be accomplished without some disorder and delay. But loyalty and union did it, and on June 26th, 1917, only two months after the declaration of war, the first American doughboy landed on French soil. On November 3d, 1917, the Yanks had their first clash with the Germans. On January 31st, 1918, a report reached America that American infantrymen were occupying first line trenches for the first time.

French Crossing a Perilous Bridge on the Advance Toward St. Quentin, 1917.
By this time the United States had declared a state of war existing with Austria-Hungary, Germany's chief ally, and had swung her domestic machinery into the greatest war machine conceivable. She had begun to raise by popular bond subscriptions billions of dollars to supply guns and munitions, and food and clothes, for the boys who were going over to France to do the job.

Four Liberty Loans were floated during the war, and the total subscriptions to these amounted to between eighteen and nineteen billions of dollars. This amount was taken by more than 50 million subscribers, and was to be only an insignificant factor in the financing of the war, according to the Treasury Department. This cost when compared with the total cost of the Civil War for four years—approximately $4,000,000,000—is proof enough that the World War was not comparable with any previous war in history. In April, 1919, following the armistice, another Fifth or Victory Loan of approximately the same dimensions as the Fourth, was floated. The wonderfully prompt and generous response of the nation to each of the calls of the Liberty Loans was one of the greatest sources of inspiration for the men in uniform who had gone to fight for those at home. The same patriotic generosity that marked the success of the Liberty Loan was evident in each of the scores of war work drives that were conducted for the various relief and welfare organizations.

Food conservation—conservation of man-power, the work or fight order, the noble, work of the women who sewed and knitted night and day for the Red Cross and the boys, the curtailment of profits and the simple economy was practiced by rich and poor alike, were but a few of the many war time measures that characterized the life of America's hundred and some million during the year and a half during which she was at war. No history of that war will ever have room for a just story of the part played by the loyal home folks—those who waited and prayed, and worked and gave, to keep the home fires burning.
Foremost among the initial problems of America, after preliminary plans for the raising of her army had been laid, was the problem of transporting them to France, so that their strength might be thrown against the Hun on the battlefield. Shipping was not available, and even though it was being increased at maximum capacity, still there was not more than half as much as was needed to transport the men in the numbers they were being trained and in the numbers they were needed by France and England and Italy.

England gladly placed her available shipping at the disposal of the United States, and before the war had ended she had carried more than one million Yanks to the side of her own men and those of the French, or nearly half of those who had gone overseas. The importance of the United States Navy in the war can hardly be exaggerated. Within less than a month after hostilities were declared, she had sent a detachment of destroyers to European waters. By October, 1918, there were 338 ships of all classes flying the American flag in foreign waters. The operations of the Navy during the war covered the widest scope in its history. They operated in European waters from the Mediterranean to the White Sea. At Corfu, Gibraltar, in the Bay of Biscay, on the Irish Coast, at the English Channel ports, in the North Sea and at Archangel, they did creditable work. This service was not as brilliant perhaps as that of the army, because the nature of its vital work kept it from the front. Even though its activities were probably less glorious, still they were none the less important and necessary to the cause.

Naval men served on nearly 2000 craft that plied the waters of the globe, on submarines that had no fear of the under-sea perils, and in aviation where men of courage fought and prevented surprise attacks with new-found weapons.
In diplomacy, in investigation at home and in all parts of the world by naval officers and civilian agents, in protecting industry from enemy spies, in promoting new industries and enlarging older ones to meet war-time needs—these are a few of the accomplishments that are outstanding in the part played by the Navy in winning the war.

Shortly after the declaration of war, the submarine problem had become so acute and the merchant ship losses so great, it became necessary to adopt more effective methods in dealing with the problem and making shipping safer. The system of convoy was adopted at the suggestion of President Wilson. This, although it slowed up shipping by fully twenty percent, enabled a comparatively safe passage of troops and was probably the greatest stroke of the Navy during the war.

During all the time the United States was engaged in the war the enemy’s naval forces, with the exception of the submarines, were blockaded in his ports. This, of course, prevented naval engagements of a major character. The destroyers, submarine chasers and patrol vessels, however, waged an unceasing offensive against the submarine menace to shipping and troop convoy, and only three vessels were sunk. These were the Antilles, the President Lincoln and the Covington. Each was struck on her return voyage, so that the loss of life was comparatively small. Only three fighting vessels were lost as the result of enemy action—a patrol ship, a torpedo boat destroyer and a cruiser. The other transports and destroyers struck by the enemy during the war reached port without loss of life. Other Transports carrying United States soldiers went down but these were being convoyed by the British Admiralty. Chief among these was the Tuscania, sunk off the Coast of Ireland February 5th, 1918, with a loss of 110 lives.

The most serious loss of life in the navy as a result of its war-time activity resulted when 111 officers and men of the Coast Guard cutter Tampa perished when their vessel was sunk in Bristol Channel, England, in September, 1918. The Tampa had been doing escort duty in the transport service. It had gone ahead of the convoy and was sunk soon after leaving the party.
British Flyers “Taking Off” at Dawn for a Trip Over the Lines and a Few Fokkers.

With its record of phenomenal transport service in protecting troops and shipping against the enemy submarine offensive; its splendid co-operation with the British Fleet in keeping the German navy in port and Germany herself blockaded; its stellar work with the giant 14 inch long range guns at the front; and its subsequent spectacular feat in first bridging the Atlantic by air, the United States Navy had a share in the World War which although as previously stated is seldom characterized as brilliantly as that of the Army and Marines, still was equally important and essential in keeping the war wheels turning victoriously.

The story of the activities of America’s two million doughboys and marines in France is one which should be told in volumes rather than in paragraphs. From the time of their first clash with the Germans on November 3d, 1917, until they “let go” the last unwelcome guests against Fritz’s lines early November 11th, 1918—their deeds are a succession of courageous and brilliant performances of duty.

“When I think of their heroism, their patience under hardships, and their unflinching spirit of offensive action, I am filled with emotion which I am unable to express,” General
A Giant 14-Inch U. S. Naval Gun, Manned by American Jackies, Pounding Away at Fritz at Several Miles' Range.

John J. Pershing declared in commending the officers and soldiers of the line of the American Army: "Their deeds are immortal, and they have earned the eternal gratitude of our country."

This simple tribute to the brave American lads who fought and died in France is indicative of America's reverence for her heroic armies. Their glory and fame will always live by the side of the deeds of their forbears in previous wars.

In May, 1917, shortly after war was declared, General Pershing, well-known for his punitive expedition into Mexico, was selected by the War Department to command the American Expeditionary Forces that were to go to France. After gathering about him a small staff the General set sail. His reception in both England and France was only equalled by the readiness of the commanders of both armies to co-operate with the United States in the prosecution of the war, according to the General's own report.

His general staff was organized in a short time and detailed plans worked out for the organization and training of the millions of American soldiers who were expected in France to help finish the Hun. Training areas, designed to give the final seasoning to fresh troops arriving from the States before their entry into the front lines, and officers schools for the various arms of the service were established.

Extensive construction provided vast warehouses, supply depots, munition storehouses, and the like for the huge task ahead. Although France offered much in the way of both ordnance and quartermaster property for use by the American Army, still enormous quantities of materials of all kinds had to be brought across the Atlantic.

Flocking into the Army from civil life were thousands of professional and business men with splendid talent along the lines needed to build up this immense service of supply that was to keep the A. E. F. in action. To meet the shortage of supplies due to lack of shipping, representatives of the various supply departments were constantly in search of supplies and materials in Europe. A general purchasing agency was provided, in order to better co-ordinate the purchasing and to prevent competition between departments of the army. So successful was this system in the American Army that it was almost universally adopted by the armies of the Allies before the war had ended.

“Our entry into the war found us with few of the auxiliaries necessary for its conduct in the modern sense,” General Pershing declared in his official report. “Among our most important deficiencies in material were artillery, aviation and tanks. In order to meet our requirements as quickly as possible we accepted the offer of the French Government to provide us from their own factories with the necessary artillery equipment for thirty divisions. In aviation we were in the same situation and here again the French Government came to our aid until we were able to get our own air service program under way. The necessary planes to train the air service personnel were provided and we secured from the French a total of 2676 pursuit, bombing and observation planes. The first planes to arrive from America came in May, 1918, and a total of 1379 were received during the war. The first American squadron completely equipped by American production, including airplanes, crossed the German lines on August 7th, 1918. For tanks we also were compelled to rely upon the French. We were less fortunate here, however, for the reason that the French were scarcely able to meet their own production requirements in this respect. It should be remembered by every American that the French Government always took a most liberal attitude in endeavoring to supply the shortages existing in the American Army.”

Speaking of the soldiers in Europe General Pershing outlines with words of praise the work done by the various welfare organizations and of the responsive attitude found among the soldiers by these organizations.

“The welfare of the troops touches my responsibility as Commander-in-Chief to the mothers and fathers and kindred of the men who went to France in the impressionable period of youth. They could not have the privilege accorded the soldiers of Europe during their leaves of visiting their relatives and renewing their home ties. Fully realizing that the standard of conduct that should be established for them must have a permanent influence on their lives and the character of their future citizenship, the Red Cross, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Knights of Columbus, the Salvation Army and the Jewish Welfare Board, as auxiliaries in this work, were encouraged in every manner possible. The fact that our soldiers, in a land of different customs and language, have borne themselves in a manner in keeping with the cause for which they fought, is due not only to the efforts in their behalf, but much more to other high ideals, their discipline, and their innate sense of self-respect. It should be recorded, however, that the members of these welfare societies have been untiring in their desire to be of real service to our officers and men. The patriotic devotion of these representative men and women has given a new significance to the Golden Rule, and we owe to them a debt of gratitude that can never be entirely repaid.”
The First Division of the American Army, after finishing its preliminary training behind the lines, went to the trenches for the first time in October, 1917, as the first contribution to the fighting forces of the Allies. By the time that the great German offensive in Picardy began, on March 21st, 1918, the American army had four experienced divisions in the line. The great crisis that this drive developed, however, made it impossible for the Americans to take over a sector by themselves. Gradually, as their numbers increased and more reserves, fresh from the States, were placed in training behind the lines, the American boys went in in substantial numbers. Already they had displayed their splendid fighting qualities and had demonstrated that as soldiers they had no superiors. Incidentally, it did not take them long to convince the enemy that contrary to their own opinions, they themselves were not invincible.

On August 30th, 1918, the American forces took over the first American sector, in preparation for the St. Mihiel offensive. The American line was soon extended across the Meuse River to the west edge of the Argonne Forest. The concentration of tanks, aviation units, artillery equipment, and materials of all kinds for this first great American offensive was enormous. The scores of elements of a complete army were moulded together, with American railroad and American service of supply units throughout. The concentration included the bringing up of approximately 600,000 troops. The French Independent Air Force, together with British bombing units and American Air forces, placed the greatest aviation personnel that ever took part in any Western Front offensive under the direct command of General Pershing.

On the day after they had taken the St. Mihiel Salient a great share of the corps and army artillery that had operated in that offensive were on the move toward the area back of the line between the Meuse River and the western edge of the Argonne. The German General Staff was well aware of the consequences of an American success along this line, and it was determined to use every available American division in an effort to force a decision at this point. The attack began on September 26th. The work of the American army and of the American engineers in this drive will forever remain in the memory of generations to come. Forcing their way through the densely wooded and shell torn areas, their fight was one of the most brilliant battles of the war. The offensive was maintained until October 4th in the face of innumerable wooded patches of snipers and concealed machine gunners.

Fresh troops with little experience were thrown in with their seasoned comrades, who had become veterans over night with this most crucial battle as their teacher. The second phase began with a renewed attack all along the front on October 4th. More positions were taken with a precision and speed that always characterized the Yank army. Their dogged offensive was wearing down the enemy, who, continuing desperately by throwing his best troops against them, was helpless before the spectacular advance.

At this juncture two divisions were dispatched to Belgium to help the French army near Ypres. On October 23d, the last phase of the Meuse-Argonne offensive began. Violent counter attacks by the enemy lost him heavily, while a regrouping of the American force was going on for the final drive. Plain evidences of loss of morale in the enemy forces gave our men added courage and spirit, and finally, using comparatively fresh divisions, the last advance was begun on November 1st. It was apparent at this time that the end was near for the Boche. Our increased artillery support did remarkable work in supporting the infantry, which by its dashing advance of the several weeks preceding had destroyed the Hun’s will to resist.

Between September 26th and November 6th they had taken 26,059 prisoners and 468 guns on this front.
The divisions engaged in this, the most important of America's battles in the European war, were the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 26th, 28th, 29th, 32d, 33d, 35th, 37th, 42d, 77th, 78th, 79th, 80th, 82d, 89th, 90th and 91st. Many of these divisions remained in line for a length of time that required nerves of steel while still others were put back in the line after only a few days of rest.

When the armistice was signed following a complete routing of the enemy by Americans in the Argonne Forest there were in France, according to General Pershing, approximately 2,053,347 troops, less the casualties. Of this total there were 1,338,169 combatant troops. Up to November 18th the losses were: Killed and wounded, 36,145; died of disease, 14,811; deaths unclassified, 2,204; wounded 179,625; prisoners, 2,163; missing in action 1,160. As against this casualty total, the American forces captured about 44,000 prisoners and 1,400 guns, howitzers and trench mortars.

In this short summary of the principal activities of the United States' part in the great war it is obviously impossible to more than skim over the various features of the great war machinery. The heroism and gallantry of the boys who fought and died over there; the unceasing devotion and courage of the parents and citizens at home who stood by them so unselfishly; and the determination of everyone, young and old, to unite for the common cause, setting aside their personal desires and interests, was responsible for the glorious victory in which America was so conspicuously instrumental in bringing about. Outstripping a hundredfold the dimensions of any previous war of the United States, the task accomplished was a revelation to all when viewed in retrospect. The accomplishments of the Liberty Loans, the devotion of the millions of mothers and sisters in behalf of the Red Cross, the wonderful response of the country to the operation of the Selective Service Act in raising an army of millions—the sacrifices of all, at home and abroad, were universal during the year and a half at which America was at war.

Loyalty and love of country were terms with new meanings. Sedition was lurking only here and there, and this was promptly done away with through the efficient secret service department and popular opinion. The four million American boys who were under arms, many of them at the front and the remainder eager for the chance to jump in, convinced the world that the fighting blood that gave birth to their nation had not been diluted through the riotous living of a century. The brave lads who gave their lives and are now buried over there went to their fate with hearts full of joy, and in a manner that gave courage to the veterans of four years who fought beside them. And their brave mothers in the States who waited in vain for peace to bring their sons back to them, made the greatest sacrifices within their power with a courage and willingness that was unequalled even by the Spartans themselves.

When the history of the great European struggle is permanently written, there will be no more brilliant chapters than those telling of the part played by the United States of America in stamping out militaristic autocracy from the world.
