forecast for '63

Last November 17, when the Jackrabbits walked off the field after their final game of the '62 season, the outlook for the coming year wasn't exactly good, but it wasn't bad either.

Coach Ralph Ginn knew he'd be faced with rebuilding one of the most potent scoring combinations the Jackrabbits have had in recent years. The '62 Jacks could run, pass, and kick. Now the passing and kicking would have to be replaced.

On the other hand, the solid Jackrabbit line was left largely intact, the running game hadn't suffered much, and there were some good prospects coming up from the ranks.

Since that time, the picture has changed somewhat. Ineligibilities and a dropout hit both the line and backfield, to put a greater load on the newcomers.

Joining the casualty list since November have been fullback Dave Korver, tackle Dick Knofczynski and halfback Gary Boner. Boner, who is eligible under the NCAA but not the North Central, has been described by Ginn as "the most exciting runner to come along in this league in a decade." His loss will be keenly felt by the Jacks.

Biggest problem will be at quarterback, where experience is in short supply and the shoes of all-conference Dean Koster will be difficult to fill. Although spring drills produced some "almost" quarterbacks, none has so far come to the fore as the man who's going to run the team. Tri-Captain Doug Peterson, versatile and a highly capable athlete who was one of the league's outstanding secondary men last year, will probably get first crack at the post. Backing him up will be Bob Webbenhurst, a junior, and sophomores Ron Meyer and Dave Glasrud.

At the halfbacks, Wayne Rasmussen is back as one of the most spirited and competitive athletes ever to play for South Dakota State. "Ras" was the league's leading receiver last year, was named an all-conference selection, and is one of the Jackrabbit tri-captains.

Jim Dwyer, who earned a starting role as a halfback while still a sophomore, is a likely candidate to play opposite Rasmussen.

Backing up at the halfback slot will be Daryl Martin, a senior and two-time letterman, LeRoy "Butch" Benson, a sophomore who has shown considerable promise; Terry Gukeisen a junior, and Reed Sanderson, a sophomore.

Junior Gale Douglas, who saw action at fullback last year, could inherit the starting post this fall, with sophomore Jim Nesvold also in contention.

Back to bolster the Jackrabbit line are Tri-Captain Jerry Ochs and lettermen Roger Larson and Lyle Farrand at center; lettermen Fred Holloway, Dennis Dee and Dave Westbrook at the tackles; Stan Jacobsen, Gary Neuharth and Bob Williams at the guards, Arden Mackenthun and Darrel Tramp at the ends. Letterman Don Huls could play at either end or guard.

No small factor in the Jackrabbit outlook for 1963 is the schedule. Termed a "suicide schedule" by Ginn, it opens on the road with Montana State, Sept. 14, followed by Nebraska one week later. Both teams can field greater depth and manpower than the Jacks.

In the North Central, Ginn regards the University of North Dakota and State College of Iowa as favorites based on returns from a year ago, with Augustana, Morningside and the University of South Dakota in the role of possible dark horse candidates. North Dakota State with a new coaching staff and a veteran squad will be much improved over last year.

Traveling with the Jacks

One of the fringe benefits of getting your backbone jolted five times a week and twice on Saturday is the football trip.

The Jackrabbits take five to six of them each year, ranging from a bus ride to nearby Sioux Falls to a prop-jet flight to Denver or Toledo.

Although the trips are not exactly sightseeing excursions and follow a rigid, hour-by-hour schedule from start to finish, they do have their compensations.

A student who has seldom ventured far out of Peever, Pukwana, or for that matter, Sioux Falls, except in the family auto, suddenly finds himself winging half-way across the country, staying at a metropolitan hotel and eating in a first-class restaurant.

White shirts, coats and ties are the standard dress for Jackrabbit teams on the road, who, except for their size and a somewhat ruddier glow about them, could easily be mistaken for a traveling debate team or men's choral group.

The day of the trip, each player is issued a trip itinerary which carries an explicit breakdown of the schedule to be followed—mealtimes, arrival and departure times, chalk talks, workouts, taping, and even down to and including strongly recommended bits of advice as "rest in your rooms . . . take a walk . . . take in a movie . . . or, Defeat the Bobcats! (or whoever the opponent happens to be that weekend)."

Although little time is allowed for sightseeing, shopping or other self indulgences, the trips do have a certain educational value. Players get a chance to meet people, see other campuses in other parts of the country, and generally see themselves in somewhat better perspective.

A college staff member traveling with the team once made the comment, "I wish all of our students had an opportunity to make a trip like this. It would add a lot to their education." His 40-odd fellow passengers would be quick to agree.

This year, the Jacks will make trips to Great Falls, Mont.; Lincoln, Neb.; Sioux Falls; Grand Forks, N. D.; St. Paul, Minn.; Des Moines, Iowa, and Jonesboro, Ark.—six states in as many games.

The accompanying pictures were taken on last year's trip to Colorado State.

Getting there is the easy part . . . traveling offers a chance to read, nap, chat and relax, saving energies for later.

Moment of decision . . . "prayer meeting" atmosphere pervades locker room as Coach Ralph Ginn gives final instructions.

Homework comes along . . . with games on ten successive weekends and practice every night, homework must be worked in whenever the opportunity comes up.

Tension, determination . . . mark face of game-bound players. No backing out now.

Harnessing up . . . Trainer Tom Woodall applies a strategic pad, brace or strip of tape to reduce the danger of injury.

All over . . . time to relax, rest up, catch your breath before digging in for next week's game.

GINN, on the coach as a teacher--

"... it's not what you know that counts."

Ralph Ginn is a practical man. He doesn't do things just because they're the fad this year or because he's read about them in a book on successful coaching techniques.

In 40 years of playing and coaching football he has become something of a practical psychologist, and, perhaps more important, a teacher.

Commenting on the latter, Ginn told a group of high school athletes and their parents last spring, "It's not what you know that counts, it's what you teach."

Teaching, Ginn feels, is much the same, whether it's football or physiology. "You have a certain body of fundamentals to impart, but teaching those is not enough. You also have to help your student to recognize how and when to apply them.

In football, the fundamentals are such things as blocking, tackling and sound physical conditioning. In these, Ginn is a strict taskmaster who insists on perfection within the limits of a player's ability.

The other element is that loosely defined attribute known as "character." Quoting Ginn again—"Character in a football player is when he knows his job thoroughly and has confidence in his ability to do it right, regardless of the circumstances."

"A football player who develops such traits of character carries them with him throughout his life and they stand him in good stead, no matter what he undertakes."

The philosophy has had both its practical and personal rewards for Ginn. Over the past 16 years, his Jackrabbit teams have won or shared the North Central Conference title eight times. He has been honored four times as "coach of the year," at the high school and college level, on a statewide and conference basis. He has been honored as a Distinguished Alumnus of Tarkio College, his alma mater, and was one of eight candidates for the national small college coach-of-the-year in 1961.

Particularly satisfying to Ginn was his election a year ago to the Beadle Club, an organization of distinguished South Dakota schoolmen. Coming, as it did, from outside the field of athletics, the honor gave further recognition to his work as an educator.

Characteristically, South Dakota State football teams are not composed of former high school "stars." Ginn is in his best element when working with players, usually from the smaller schools, who have the desire and potential to play football, but have not had the advantage of elaborate systems of coaches in the larger cities.

Eighteen of Ginn's players have gone on to stints of varying lengths with professional football teams. But perhaps more important, many more of them have gone out to make their mark in business and professional fields, teaching, coaching, the military and even politics. It is in these that Ginn finds his greatest satisfaction. Especially satisfying to him are the achievements of some of the "little guys," the players who never quite made the headlines or the record books, but who stuck with the team and made a solid contribution to its success.

"What they did do was learn to make the most of their God-given talents," Ginn says, "which, after all is the object of all coaching and teaching. If you can help a player or student realize his fullest potential, you have achieved your purpose."

coaching staff

ERVIN HUETHER, backfield coach

One of the most important, but probably least appreciated aspects of a successful football team is the scouting reports it gets on the opposition. Erv Huether handles this job at State in addition to coaching the backs. A dedicated and conscientious coach, Erv is beginning his 14th year at State. He's also the head baseball coach. He holds a bachelor's degree from Yankton College and a master's from Minnesota, and coached at Bowdoin and Bates Colleges in Maine and in the Navy before coming to State.

WARREN WILLIAMSON, freshman coach

Laying the groundwork for turning a high school footballer into varsity material is Warren Williamson's responsibility. As a former Jackrabbit star himself, he tackles it with vigor and conviction. He's also head wrestling coach at State and an enthusiastic proponent of that sport. Holder of both bachelor's and master's degrees from State, Warren coached high school ball at Clear Lake and Winner before returning to his alma mater. Williamson's scoring feats are still on the Jackrabbit record books and he still claims a share of their total offense mark. He's been a member of the staff since 1956.

STAN MARSHALL, line coach

Just back from a year's study toward his doctor's degree at Springfield College under Jack Frost, former athletic director at State, Stan begins his sixth season as the Jackrabbit line coach. He was spelled a year ago by Rog Kerns who now holds a similar post at the University of South Dakota. Stan was on State grid teams from 1947 to 1949 and coached at Groton, Centerville, Hot Springs and Jamestown College before returning to State. His grid and track teams compiled impressive records both years he was coach at Jamestown. Graduated with high honor in 1950, he earned a master's degree at Iowa in 1953.

DR. AXEL C. (AX) BUNDGAARD, director of athletics and physical education Completing his second year in the athletic director's chair at South Dakota State College, "Ax" Bundgaard is a 6'3½", 210-pound Dane who is dedicated to the idea an institution should have an all-around athletic program and an expanded program wherever possible. A 1939 graduate of Midland College, Fremont, Neb., he earned a master's degree from the University of Michigan ('47) and his doctorate from the State University of Iowa ('58). He coached in several Nebraska high schools and served as athletic director, chairman of the physical education department, head basketball coach, co-track coach, acting tennis coach and cross-country coach at Wartburg College, Waverly, Iowa, prior to coming to State College in the summer of 1961.

PRESS AND RADIO

PRESS AND RADIO OUTLETS

The Press Box

Working facilities for sportswriters, sportscasters, photographers, spotters, scouts and publicity men are allocated on a first-come, first-served basis through the State College News Bureau. Requests for such facilities should be made well in advance of the game to insure reservations. Tickets will be mailed the week of the game. Play-by-play broadcasts, photographs, film footage and other services can usually be arranged if requests for them are received sufficiently ahead of the game.
