

The Laws of Thermodynamics

Cheyenne Marie Marco

I.

Trade me one for the other.

A whisper for a scream

Blended with cake and meat.

You can't have both.

II.

Unburn the ashes and rebuild the tree.

How can you absorb the crash of timber?

There is no real silence after a word.

You can't have it back.

III.

You can get closer,

move slower,

grow into nothing.

But you can never stop.
