Five Questions
Marsha Warren Mittman

What is the color of despair
I ask
Of those blind to its pain

What is the sound of hope
I wonder
When pleas for change are ignored

What is the touch of neglect
I shout
To those who turn their backs

What is the taste of anger
I yell
When people cannot feel

What is the smell of death
I cry
At those who walk away