CHILD’S MADE-OVER DRESS

by

Azalea Linfield,
Extension Clothing Specialist.

Many worn garments may be renovated and remodeled into useful clothes for the younger members of the family. There are more possibilities in making over clothing for children than for adults, because smaller amounts of material are necessary. Materials that are too old in weave, color, or figure should not be used unless this fault can be disguised. Sometimes the addition of contrasting color will solve this problem.

The following preparation is essential for best results in re-making:

1. Careful ripping, removing all threads.
2. Mending worn places in parts to be used.
4. Removal of stains or
5. Sponging, washing, or dying.
6. Careful pressing not to alter shape.

GENERAL SUGGESTIONS

In a made-over garment consider the following points:

1. Is the material worth making over?
2. Time may be saved by planning the new garment before ripping the old one.
3. Do not use expensive trimmings or expensive new material with worn cloth. It is apt to make the old material look shabby by contrast.
4. Piecings or worn places may be hidden by tucks, plaits, or trimming, such as buttons, thread, or embroidery.
